AND MANY PERISHUVALDE, A TEXAS TOWN
WIPE OUT BY WATER.

The Artesian Basin on the Top of the Hills Gives Way and Precipitates the Flood On the City Below Many People Drowned—Loss $1,500,000.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Sept. 1.—An earthquake burst the earthen walls of an artesian water basin in the hills near Uvalde, a thriving town, the county seat of Uvalde county, Texas, at 2 o'clock yesterday morning. The flood overwhelmed the town, submerging and wrecking houses and drowning a number of people. It is feared that 200 or 300 people may have been drowned in the lowlands south of Uvalde.

Among those known to have perished are the following:
EDWARDS, MATTIE, MISS.
HATCH, JOE, MRS.
MALEY, —, infant.
TWO MEXICANS.

THREE FAMILIES, names unknown.
It was 2 o'clock in the morning when the flood came. The weather had been threatening and there were ominous clouds to the northeast of the town. The atmosphere had been close during the evening and predictions of a storm were freely made. The dark clouds rose higher and higher. Just as the storm broke over the city in all its fury a torrent of water rushed down the Leona river, overflowing the banks of that stream and flooding the low lands on either side to a depth of several feet. It was at first supposed the flood was caused by a cloudburst.

An earthquake shock of some seconds' duration was distinctly felt during the night. At one place near the city a quarter of a mile of heavy cracks appear on each side of the Leona river, having apparently no bottom.

The east side of Uvalde is built on lowland and was directly in the path of this water. All the houses in the heart of the town were submerged, and in the darkness and throughout the downpour of rain that was falling could be heard the cries of distress from the ill-fated inhabitants in their wild efforts to save their lives and those of their families and loved ones. There were a number of miraculous escapes, and the rescuers and the rescued performed many heroic acts.

As soon as those in the higher part of the town were made aware of the terrible flood and its dire consequences the work of rescuing was begun and carried out as rapidly as possible in the darkness of the night.

Great apprehension is felt for the families living on the ditch south of Uvalde, where from seventy-five to one hundred families live, and the land lying fifteen feet lower than Uvalde. It is feared they have been destroyed. One Mexican family living on the ranch of L. Schwartz, five miles below, is supposed to have been lost, no vestige of the ranch buildings being left. It is feared that Indianola history is repeated.

A track walker of the Southern Pacific, after wading through water up to his neck with his lantern elevated above his head, succeeded in feeling his way far enough east to intercept a westbound train and prevent its plunging into the raging river where the railroad bridge had been destroyed.

News reached Uvalde that three families living below town were drowned. The names have not yet been learned.

The loss to the Southern Pacific company is enormous, forty miles of track and many bridges having been washed away. Over one hundred carloads of material and 300 laborers left San Antonio for the scene of the wreckage. The damage to the Southern Pacific extends eastward about seventy-five miles from Uvalde.

A rough estimate of the loss to property in general and the railroad company will, as far as known, reach $1,500,000.

CAMPANIA'S NEW RECORD.

Made the Voyage to Daunt's Rock in 8 Days 10 Hours 47 Minutes.

LONDON, Sept. 1.—The Cunard liner steamer Campania, which sailed from New York Aug. 25, arrived at Queenstown yesterday, bringing with her another new transatlantic record of speed. She passed Daunt's rock at 5:34 a. m., having made the passage to that point in five days ten hours and forty-seven minutes. Heretofore the eastward record has been five days twelve hours and seven minutes, made in November, 1893, by the Campania. The passage just ended to-day, therefore, reduces the time by one hour and twenty minutes. The Campania experienced dense fog on the banks for nine hours and was forced to run at a greatly reduced speed. It is calculated that not less than sixty miles were lost owing to these unfavorable conditions. According to her log the big steamer's run was, up to noon, Aug. 26, 466 knots, and daily thereafter 513, 451, 311, 503 and 365 knots to Daunt's rock. The average speed attained was 21.50 knots, which has only twice been beaten, on both occasions by the Lucania, when in March of this year she covered 21.54 knots, and in June of this year, when the average was 21.89.

New York, Sept. 1.—The Cunard liner Lucania, which sailed from Queenstown at 12:45 p. m. Aug. 26, passed in at Sandy Hook at 5:18 o'clock yesterday afternoon. She had lowered the record of the steamer Campania by forty minutes.

Fire at Hong Kong.

HONG KONG, Sept. 1.—A terrible fire has occurred on the Canton river.

A flower boat caught fire and the flames spread until hundreds of those craft were destroyed. The progress of the fire was so rapid that at least 1,000 natives perished in the flames or drowned. The flower boats were moored stem and stern, in rows, and large numbers of natives lived upon them.

The spread of the conflagration from one boat to another was so rapid that the unfortunate Chinese had no time to cut away from the moorings, a strong wind materially helping the increase of the fire.

Many hundreds of persons on board the flower-boats leaped overboard and were drowned, while several hundred others remained on board and perished in the flames.

Monday last Hong Kong was declared free of the plague. The number of cases has been reduced to a minimum.

TRADE IS GAINING SLOWLY.

Improvement Possibly More Encouraging Than a Spasmodic Rise

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says: "The activity which came with exhausted stocks and the pressure of delayed fall demands, and which was increased by the removal of uncertainty about the tariff, has continued with heavy entries of foreign goods since the bill became a law. The gain is not yet what was expected, and business, if good in comparison with last year, is still poor in comparison with years preceding. Presumably there has not been time to feel the full effects of the change, and a gradual gain will be more healthy and encouraging than a spasmodic rise, but the expansion of commercial loans has suddenly ceased, prices of manufactured products show weakness rather than strength and there has been a reaction in the stock market, prices of railway stocks averaging 32 cents and of trust stock 2.11 per share lower than a week ago.

"Wheat moves largely and western receipts were 5,762,777 bushels for the week, against 3,923,901 last year, and for August 28,500,000 bushels, against 15,500,000 last year, which does not fit short crop predictions. Atlantic exports for the month have been only 14,000,000 bushels against 24,000,000 last year and the price has risen a shade during the week. Receipts of corn are only 1,423,302 bushels, against 3,160,646 for the week last year, while exports are magnificent and the prices advanced 3 1/2 cents, while pork has risen 25 cents per barrel and lard 55 cents per 100 pounds.

Fears of frost, the crop being late, are argued as a reason for quotations otherwise unwarranted. Cotton has declined an eighth for the week, but the year closes with every indication of a yield materially exceeding the world's maximum consumption of American and with 1,600,000 bales of old cotton in sight. If all the mills were running full force the situation would not promise much. The demand for products of iron and steel has increased, but prices tend downward where any change appears, as there is not enough business yet to employ the works in operation. Steel bars are sold at 1 cent at Pittsburgh and wire nails at 1.05 cents, with Bessemer iron at $11.65, several additional furnaces having gone into blast.

"Failures are still few and small. For the third week of August reported liabilities were $2,976,518, but for three weeks only $8,214,470, of which $2,845,338 were of manufacturing and $3,844,414 of trading concerns. The average is only $11,521 per firm failing. The failures this week have been 168 in the United States, against 356 last year, and forty in Canada, against twenty-nine last year."

Milwaukee Situation Better.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Sept. 1.—The health department officials removed two smallpox victims to the Isolation hospital yesterday. Meantime Game Warden Johnson repaired to the Indian camp and warned the redskins to desist. They threatened to kill him and he fled. FOOT-TWISTERS.

Whoever invented cedar block sidewalks should be compelled to walk on them for the rest of his life. We take that back. It would be unconstitutional—a cruel and unusual punishment. They are foot-twisters, these sidewalks, when decay sinks their rims and lifts their centers into equal cones of all shapes and sizes. It is these which do the mischief. They catch you by the ball of one foot and the heel or toes or side bones of the other, or by several of these at a time. The next step reverses the process, and half a dozen involve every bone and muscle and every corn and bunion of both feet in changing combinations of tortuous and torturing curves and angles. They are twisted and squeezed and wrung and pinched and pounded till every ligament aches. Walking on cobble stones or brickbats is pleasantness and peace in comparison.

son. If hell was paved with them the fire and brimstone could be dispensed with, and Satan would gloat over this modern improvement in the machinery of torture.

A DREAM.

In the stillness of last night
 With the moon's rays on my pillow,
 I had a dream of you so bright:
 You were sitting 'neath a weeping willow.
 I went near and looked in your eyes;
 I could see love, sweet love, unexpressed,
 Yet I dared not take, ev'n by surprise,
 One kiss from those lips so blest.

For even to touch you seemed joy
 That no more I asked when waking
 My love for you was without alloy
 My heart was almost breaking.

I touched your hand, you did not start
 But quivering rose and came to me
 I clasped you to my longing heart
 Then awoke to all my misery.

Hospital.

James G. Alden, an old man, was run down and seriously injured this morning by a horse owned by Dr. Bedford, and driven by a boy named Sullivan, who works for the doctor. The accident occurred on the bridge, near Wheelock's crockery store, this forenoon. Mr. Alden was knocked down with considerable force, sufficient to render him insensible, and when picked up it was thought he was dying. The fire patrol ambulance took him to Oak Lawn hospital, where Dr. J. B. Whiting attended him. No bones were broken, but the shock occasioned by the heavy blow and fall was severe for a man of Mr. Alden's years.

BIG BOILER BURST AND SPREAD HAVOC

C. A. STANTON'S STEAMER EX-PLODES THIS MORNING.

End of the Building Blown Out and Glass in the Stores of J. L. Ford & Son, The Golden Eagle, F. D.
Kimball's and Marzluff's Shoe Factory Broken—Six Are Hurt.

An explosion that shook buildings in all parts of town and was followed by a fire alarm brought all of Janesville up with a short, sharp jerk at 7:35 this morning.

It cost $6,000.

The twenty-horse power boiler in Charles A. Stanton's laundry, under the Merchants and Mechanics bank had exploded with terrific force, spreading destruction on every side, making a wreck in the laundry, breaking glass and springing walls in the adjoining buildings.

Six people were slightly injured.

They were:

MISS JULIA KINNA, buried in the debris;

head cut slightly and body severely bruised.

MISS KITTIE CONNORS, wound on the leg,

and cuts; none serious.

MISS BERTHA GREENWALD, injuries

slight.

CORNELIUS ROBERTS, assessor, slight cut in the face.

A. A. KAPELSKY, tailor in J. L. Ford's, severe bruise from being struck by a table.

GUSTAVE HAISE, dyer in C. F. Brockhaus's

shop, head cut by flying brick; injury not serious.

Damage Was Extensive.

The damage done was widespread and can be summarized as follows:

BANK BUILDING, in which the laundry was located; rear end blown out, and much of the walls that are standing will have to be taken down. The entire building is more or less damaged.

POST OFFICE BUILDING, the portion in the rear basement occupied by C. F. Brock-haus dye house, more or less wrecked, and much of the holding the front sprung out of place.

J. L. FORD'S STORE, plate glass in front all stove to atoms.

GOLDEN EAGLE, clothing store, plate glass broken.

VACANT STORE, B. B. Baker's old stand,

plate glass broken.

F. D. KIMBALL, plate glass broken.

F. M. MARZLUFF's building, glass on the side near the explosion all broken.

STANTON'S LAUNDRY, machinery more or less wrecked, and boiler blown to pieces.

CROSSETT building; dye house, side or rear addition blown in.

CLOSSETT mill; glass broken, and hole

punched in wooden awning.

It was a "lucky accident."

Had the explosion gone the other way there is no telling how many people would have been killed or how much damage to property would have followed.

Buildings Were Shaken.

It was exactly at 7:35 when the crash came. It was the jarring

thud and suppressed rumble that always denote the exploding of a boiler and the shock was felt all over town. People near the scene saw a column of brick and debris shoot into the air above the roofs of the buildings and an instant later it rained

down into the river and on the adjoining buildings. A great cloud of dust arose and the firemen at the West side

station pulled their box, 18, thinking their services might be needed. The alarm following the explosion so closely called out an immense crowd

of people who thronged the sidewalks

and streets in all directions.

The wreckage that was plainly apparent told where the trouble lay.

Behind the laundry and inside a circle of big willow trees lay piles of brick,

timber and machinery while a gaping

hole in the rear wall of the building

extended nearly to the third floor.

Boiler Lay in the Wreck.

At one side lay the tubular portion of the boiler with the shell gone and around it was the shattered machinery and ruins. Inside the laundry was a mass of crushed and broken bricks, shivered timbers, twisted and broken

belts and bent and blackened gas pipes. The whole end of the building was gone and from the front office

the view over the ruins extended to the Marzluff factory in the rear. A little column of smoke here and there showed where a hot coal was smouldering but there was no fire. The whole building was filled with dust

and furniture and machinery was all disarranged, one heavy bosom ironer

being set nearly on end.

Brockhaus' dye house also suffered.

The side wall of the rear addition next to the laundry was blown in,

disabling some of the machinery.

Gustave Haise was at work in the room and was cut on the head by a flying brick.

J. L. Ford's window display, consisting of rolls of goods, were nearly buried in broken glass. The two front windows had gone and some on the side while the stairway at the back door was littered with soot, ashes and dust. Miss Morrissey's dressmaking rooms, which are located above the room in which the explosion occurred, were strewn with dirt

and sewing machines and furniture

all moved from their places. Had there been anyone at work here they would have been injured as the whole north wall of the room is gone.

No Cause Known.

No cause can be assigned for the accident. Frank McCuen was the engineer in charge, he taking the place of Merton Stanton who is on his vacation. McCuen was seen a few minutes after the explosion, when he said:

"I had just filled the boiler with water. I had forty pounds of steam.

I went after coal with a wheelbarrow,

and when I was coming back I heard steam escaping, as though a pipe was broken. I put the barrow down, and as I did so the explosion came. I was at the rear corner next to the river."

This explanation is all that is known about the cause of the explosion. The boiler was compari-tively a new one, being built at Jefferson by F. O. Ambrose, and was put into the laundry new one year ago last May. It was twelve feet long and contained twenty-six flues.

Explosion Was Terrible.

The force of the explosion was terrible. Not only did the huge boiler tear out the ends of the building, but the boiler itself was hurled a distance of thirty feet to the rear and to one side. The boiler was completely torn to pieces, only a portion of the flues remaining together. The steam engine and portion of the boiler plate,

were thrown at least one hundred feet
to the rear, some of the pieces falling into the river, which for some time after the explosion was strewn with floating wreckage. With the crash

the plate glass collapsed in the Golden Eagle, J. L. Ford's, M. C. Jeffris' vacant store, F. D. Kimball's and other places. A flying plank came down and foremost and crashed through the bridge between Kimball's store and the small brick building in the rear

as if the two-inch plank had been pasteboard. Nearly every window in Marzluff's factory was broken and in many instances the sash was torn out bodily.

No One Seriously Hurt.

Lucky it was, but no person was seriously injured.

Miss Julia Kinna, one of the employees, was at work sorting clothes near the boiler, she was knocked down by flying boards, and completely buried in the debris. When rescued she was partly unconscious, her head was slightly cut and her body bruised. After being examined by Drs. Woods and Metcalf, she was taken to her boarding house at 202

Cherry street by the fire patrol ambulance.

HORTLY past noon on the 22d of December, 1888, the beach patrol of the Humboldt station, on the Pacific coast, California, saw a schooner struggling on the outer bar some two miles from the station. She had left a landing in the bay shortly before and proceeded rapidly to sea under steam and sail in order to cross the shoals at high tide. The patrolman saw that her course lay wide of the channel, and suspecting danger, he immediately manned the boat and rowed out toward the shoals. The wind blew a gale from the southeast, heaving up the waters of the bay in angry breakers along the bar, and the strong tide setting in shore from the ocean made a rough sea for the boat to contend against. On reaching the first line of breakers the surfmen, whose thoughts and eyes had been centered upon the stranded ship, were amazed to see upon the crest of a huge wave in front of them a small boat full of water, with two men clinging to it. Changing their course, the surfmen pulled heartily toward the boat, but before they could reach it another one lifted the frail craft and rolled it over like a log, dashing the men into the boiling surf. The sea was covered with wreckage, and it tested the strength of the surfmen to the utmost to make headway through it, but they finally hauled the two men on board. The poor fellows had just strength enough left to say that five others, including a woman and child, had been cast overboard from the boat when it swamped. Urging the surfboat through the breakers, the life savers picked up a man and woman, the latter, unimpaired of her own condition, piteously begging the rescuers to save her child. On, on, through the breakers, the wind driving one way and the tide surging the other, the brave men urged the boat toward a small object, which drifted, a helpless plaything, upon the angry waves. Suddenly a comber lifted it and dashed it past the boat far astern, and then the surfmen saw that it was a child wrapped in a life preserver and floating face downward. The contrary currents and heavy wind wouldn't admit of turning the boat short in the breakers, and heroic efforts to back her through the surf proved useless. Far astern and driven even farther by the lashing tide, the child could be seen passing hopelessly beyond reach. There was one chance of rescue, and acting on his own inspiration Surferman John Regnier leaped into the sea and struck out for the hapless waif, which he soon held in his strong grasp. Then followed a battle with the breakers and the adverse tide to reach the boat. No help whatever could be given, but at last he swam alongside and handed the unconscious babe to his mates just as the mother lapsed into unconsciousness after her long peril and suspense. Again the boat was urged forward over the shoals and two more men picked up, making the whole of the boat party rescued. All of the victims were helpless from their terrible struggle in the chilling sea and the boat put back to the station, where restoratives might be applied. Not a moment was passed by the life savers on shore longer than necessary to secure attention for the sufferers taken out of the surf. Then the crew headed once more for the ship on the shoals. She could be seen lying broadside to the beach, with heavy seas lashing over her amidships. Meanwhile the captain and the sailors remaining on board attempted to float her.

The vessel was the Mendocino, a newly built schooner equipped with auxiliary steam power and laden with lumber. Her skipper had intended to cross the bar at high tide without a pilot and had missed the ocean channel by nearly a mile. Soon after she struck her stern pipes burst, and she foundered on the bar with such violence that her hull spread its seams, letting in water at an alarming rate. The captain ordered the lashings of the deckload cut in order to lighten ship, but the sailors mutinied and began to lower the boats. The small boat, manned by four sailors and carrying, besides the engineer, his wife and child, was first to put off, but before it traveled a dozen lengths it the boiling currents it swamped, casting all on board into the sea. The sailors on shipboard took warning from the catastrophe and returned to duty, but all efforts to ease the ship were useless. She was fast upon the bar, surrounded by shoals which would repel any vessel and over which the sea whirled and eddied in currents which no surfboat could resist.

On a second attempt the life savers found their ears perfectly useless, and their boat was driven past the wreck in spite of them. They returned to the station, and with the help of volunteers manned and launched their more seaworthy lifeboat. On their way to the bar the keeper joined them with a tug, by means of which the party got within hailing distance of the wreck. Her captain persisted in remaining on board to float the ship, but the surf grew so heavy that it was impossible to render help. The bar lay wholly under water, and land was more than a mile distant. The tug and lifeboat, therefore, put back to the station, and the surfmen, with their line throwing and safety apparatus, were placed on the tug. They reached the bar at 9 o'clock at night, and with the gun lashed to the bow of the tug attempted to get a line to the wreck. The second shot was successful, and in a few minutes a stout hawser from the ship was traveling through the breakers, hauled by means of a steam winch on board the tug. The strain of the current, however, baffled this effort by snapping the hauling line in two. The tide turned ebb, setting the wreck still more securely on the bar, and seeing no hope of floating her the life savers returned to the station. Daylight next morning revealed a flag of distress waving from the mast of the stranded ship, so once more the plucky surfmen manned their lifeboat and made for the dangerous shoals. The surf ran high, for the flood tide poured over the bar with all the power of the ocean behind it. The wreck could not be reached within some hundreds of yards, but after a time a line was stretched by means of a cork fender, with a rope attached, which the sailors threw overboard from the ship. The life savers caught the rope, and watching for a smooth sea hauled their boat near enough to heave a line on the wreck. A sailor then tied the lines about him and jumped into the surf. In this way two of the wrecked mariners were hauled through the breakers to the lifeboat. But the smooth water lasted for a brief spell only, and while the life savers were rescuing these two men the waves came seething and boiling on both sides of their boat, threatening to swamp it, while the receding waves left it down with hard thumps on the bar. In fact, the lifeboat was a plaything for the contending currents and waves. In the struggle to maintain their position on the bar four oars were broken in the hands of the rowers, and all of the others were wrenched from their grasp. Fortunately the oars were chained to the boat and could not float beyond reach. Before another rescue could be made the line between the boat and wreck parted, and the life savers put back to the station to fetch their beach gear, and also a tug to give them a secure base for operations. For a time everything progressed favorably. At the third chop with the line gun a rope went whirling from the tug squarely across the wreck. The sailors pulled the whip line and tail block on board, but failing to understand the printed directions attached to the block they supposed that the life savers intended to haul them through the surf as they had the others. This order they refused to undergo and contemptuously cast the block and lines back into the sea. The captain and seven sailors still remained on the wreck, and the situation was desperate in the extreme. The tide being just about to turn, there was danger that the lifeboat in attempting to approach the wreck would be drawn over the bar into the open sea. As before stated, the tug could not enter the shoal water on the bar, and the only hope of rescue lay in the boats and lines, so the surfmen grasped the oars once more. After a vigorous battle with the waves and contrary currents the boat got near enough to enable the surfmen to lay hold of the lines still float-

ING FROM THE wreck. As it was the last chance, the desperate sailors no longer hesitated, but one after another leaped into the sea, and the life savers hauled them out of the seething breakers into the boat. Thus ended the rescue of 17 lives.

Of the party of seven who had been snatched from the surf after the disaster to the ship's boat, all were nursed back to life excepting the child. The little one had doubtless strangled at the first plunge; yet, although Surferman Regnier's bravery in leaping overboard where the sea threatened to engulf him in order to satisfy the heart of the grief stricken mother was robbed of its highest glory, the noble deed fitly crowned the long and trying labors of the Humboldt station crew.

A Distinction.

"Yes, I suppose you may call Eben a successful man. He does a good business, but in my mind he isn't prosperous." So said Mrs. Tracy to her sister, who had congratulated her on the purchase by her husband of a mill which he was thought to have bought at a bargain.

"Well," returned her sister, "it seems to me everything he touches comes out just right. He's the busiest man in town."

"That's just it," retorted Mrs. Tracy. "He's busy, and he succeeds in his doings, but that isn't prospering—not as I understand it. You see," she continued, "when we were first married he leased the little woolen mill down on the stream and got along first rate. He wasn't over-busy, and we used to ride around together every afternoon and have good times."

"But he began to make money and buy more wool, and more mills to take care of it, and more storehouses to put it in, until it takes about all his time to get from one mill to the other. Sometimes I see him on a Sunday, but he is generally busy resting up to start again. He's about as much of a slave as if he was chained in a galley."

"Yes, but he does make money," said one.

"Well, perhaps so, but it all goes to buy more wool. If anybody hankers for lots of wool in this world, that's one thing. Eben has any amount of wool, but when it comes to getting the real solid goodness out of life and enjoying it he's forgotten how to do it. Really, as I look at it, Eben is the most unprosperous man in town."

Marking the Mugs.

Some years ago in India, at the Royal Artillery hospital, tin mugs were used in place of teacups. These the patients appeared to like, as several of them were stolen. The sergeant in charge determined to put a stop to this, so he marked the mugs with the letters T. O. and before many days had passed he managed to capture one of the thieves, who was forthwith taken before the chief.

In disposing of the case the chief asked the sergeant what he meant by the letters T. O. and was, as you may imagine, rather amused at the prompt reply, "Tillory's hospital, sir."—London Answers.

Avoiding Pain and Peril.

Defensive measures against the foe are ever adopted by a wise commander. You can be commander of the situation and strike a decisive blow at the start at that dangerous and relentless enemy, rheumatism, if attacked by it, by resorting in time to Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which checks permanently the progress of a malady among the most obstinate, painful and possibly dangerous, against which medical skill and the resources of materia medica are arrayed. No evidence is more convincing and convincing than that which proves that the Bitters neutralizes the rheumatic poison and checks its further development in the system. For malady and kidney trouble, dyspepsia, want of vitality, nervousness, liver complaint and constipation, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is the leading remedy.

BRIEF BITS OF HUMOR.

He Stood the Preacher Off.

Up in one of Michigan's thriving counties lives a man who is about as regardful of a dollar or two as a man can well be and be decent. He is a farmer in comfortable circumstances, and, being thrifty, honest, industrious and a bachelor, he was considered quite the catch of the neighborhood, notwithstanding his painful exactness in money matters. He finally married a widow woman in her own right ten thousand dollars, and shortly afterwards a friend met him.

"Allow me," he said, "to congratulate you. That marriage was worth a clean ten thousand dollars to you."

"No," he replied, "not quite that much."

"Indeed? I thought there was every cent of ten thousand in it."

"Oh, no," he sighed a little; "I had to pay a dollar for the marriage license."—Detroit Free Press.

'Twould Make No Difference.

A bright youth undergoing examination for admission to one of the departments at Washington found himself confronted with the question:

"What is the distance from the earth to the sun?"

Not having the exact number of miles with him he wrote in reply:

"I am unable to state accurately, but I don't think the sun is near enough to interfere with a proper performance of my duties if I get this clerkship."

He got it.—Alex. Sweet, in Texas Siftings.

True Southern Wit.

On one occasion the late Justice Lamar was taken to task by a lady at Bar Harbor who thought he did not recognize her. "Ah, judge," she said, "I am afraid you don't remember me. I met you here two years ago." "Remember you, madam?" was the quick reply, with one of his courtly bows, "why, I've been trying ever since to forget you." And she laughingly exclaimed, "Oh, go away, you dear, delightful old southern humbug."—Harper's Weekly.

Bobby—I forgot to say my prayers last night.

Bobby (cheerfully)—'Twouldn't make much difference. I shouldn't forget about it.—Harper's Bazar.

No Practical Difference.

Hostess (at evening party)—How dull everybody seems. I think I had better ask Miss Poundaway to play something.

Host—Oh, Matilda! She's such an ex-cer-able performer, you know.

Hostess—What difference does that make? It will start the conversation all the same.—Truth.

Not An Unmixed Evil.

"Willie has taken to smoking cigarettes," said Mrs. Closegrip to her lord and master when he came home from the office. "All right," growled the old man, "let him smoke 'em if he wants to. Cigarettes are cheap, and he won't be outgrowing his clothes so fast."—Indianapolis Journal.

The Monkey's Descent.

"Papa, do men descend from monkeys?" asked the thoughtful little boy of his father.

"Yes, my boy."

"And what about the monkeys?"

And the puzzled father replied: "The monkeys descend, my boy—that is—er—they descend from trees!"—Vogue.

A Disputed Case.

Many persons dispute the question as to whether or not baldness caused either by disease or neglect can be cured. In deciding the question allow us to say that most cases can be cured, while others cannot. Only a specialist of years of experience can tell this. A NARROW ESCAPE!

How it Happened.

The following remarkable event in a lady's life will interest the reader: "For a long time I had a terrible pain at my heart, which flattered almost incessantly. I had no appetite and could not sleep. I would be compelled to sit up in bed and belch gas from my stomach until I thought every minute would be my last. There was a feeling of oppression about my heart, and I was afraid to draw a full breath. I couldn't sweep a room without sitting down and resting; but, thank God, by the help of New Heart Cure all that is past and I feel like another woman. Before using the New Heart Cure I had taken different so-called remedies and been treated by doctors without any benefit until I was both discouraged and disgusted. My husband bought me a bottle of Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, and am happy to say I never regretted it, as I now have a splendid appetite and sleep well. I weighed 125 pounds when I began taking the remedy, and now I weigh 135 lbs. Its effect in my case has been truly marvelous. It far surpasses any other medicine I have ever taken or any I ever received from physicians."—Mrs. Harry Starr, Postville, Pa., October 12, 1892.

Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure is sold on a positive guarantee by all druggists, or by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles $5, express prepaid. While the Dance Goes On

In support of the startling proposition that "Most People are Crazy at Times," the well-known facts are adduced that a wise man will step backwards off a porch, a philosopher will hunt for the spectacles he holds in his hands, a hunter will shoot his comrade or his dog and people will deposit in the letter boxes in the street, gloves, deeds, mortgages, theatre tickets, spectacles and all manner of things, while carefully holding onto the letters which should have gone into the receptacles. We have been accused of being Crazy. Perhaps we are, but our accusers invariably have been those who are hurt the most because we will not join hands in holding prices up. The prices we are making on at the present time we will admit are crazy ones, but what care you? We are the losers, if there is a loss. Let those "sound minded people" compete with us. We are retailing couches of all kinds for less than any of the other furniture houses in the city can buy them wholesale.
